Foreword to the First Edition

BY THE VICE-CHANCELLOR

IN the following list will be found the names of many members of the University who have made the Army their profession and have for a longer or shorter time ceased to reside in Oxford. But the largest number of names is of those Graduates and Undergraduates who have broken off their civilian career under the stress of national peril and have come forward as soldiers in answer to the appeal of the Government. The University and the Colleges do not forget those who have finished their career here, and left us for the Army. Their names are traced in Army Lists, Lists of Honours, and of Casualties : the work of compiling the list has, in many cases, renewed the link between Colleges and their former members. But for those who are in residence now, the most impressive part of the list is that of the names of men who were here a year ago, who meant to be back again last October, and who have felt the higher call and subordinated their own immediate interests to the Country's need. The lack of them makes Oxford, even in the Summer Term, a rather desolate and desert place. They come from all classes in the State and from all Colleges. Every Society in Oxford has given of its best—in learning, in athletics, in social gifts ; and all the varieties of Oxford men—Commoners, Exhibitioners, Scholars, Fellows—will be found among them.

To one who has watched the growth since last August of this academic contribution to His Majesty's Army, it has a peculiar interest. It is largely a civilian army. The great majority of those who offered themselves had no previous intention of joining the Army. Some were already in other professions, especially that of the Schoolmaster. Others had chosen their academic course with a view of preparing for Law or Medicine or the Civil Services or Holy Orders. Many hope to return to their former pursuits when the war is over.

They form part, in fact, of a civilian army, and they are representative, to a new and high degree, of the nation as a whole. It is constantly said that there are many still who hold back selfishly from the service of their country : there are few indeed, if any, of these in the University. Our men have come forward readily and deliberately, and they represent the true feeling of the nation. The nation has risen, tentatively at first, and as it were by instinct rather than a fully reasoned decision, to fight for freedom and civilization against a more than ordinarily distasteful presentation of their opposites. Every day of the war justifies and confirms its action.

May God preserve our Oxford soldiers and bring them home with victory and peace.

THOMAS B. STRONG,

Vice-Chancellor.

CHRIST CHURCH,

May 27, 1915.

Editor's Note

THE Oxford Roll of Service includes members of our Army and Navy, and of the Armed Forces of our Allies, and contains the names of certain others who have given up their ordinary avocations to undertake duties in connexion with the war. It does not, however, record the voluntary services of many old members of the University, who, although prevented by one cause or another from joining the regular forces of the Crown, are yet giving valuable service as Special Constables or in the Volunteer Training Corps.

The book is a record of personal service, but it may perhaps be worth pointing out that the part played by the University in the war has not been limited merely to the supply of men ; she has also given freely of her hospitality and has placed many of her buildings at the disposal of the War Office. The Examination Schools are completely taken over by the 3rd Southern General Hospital, which has overflowed into various City buildings as well as into Somerville College, one of the Societies for Women Students.

Many of the Colleges have at one time or another housed officers and men of various local and other units, Territorial and New Army, Artillery and Yeomanry, and drafts of young officers sent down for their preliminary training ; at the present time no less than ten are being used to provide quarters for the two Officer Cadet Battalions which are receiving instruction at Oxford. Quite recently, too, a School for the preliminary instruction of officers of the Royal Flying Corps has been established at the University, and has restored under a novel guise the activities of the Electrical Laboratory and some other Departments of the Museum. The members and staff of the School are living at Christ Church.

A striking feature of recent years has been the growth of the influence of the Officers' Training Corps upon University life, one result of which was shown by the quite considerable number of undergraduates, qualified for immediate service as officers, who became available on the outbreak of the war. The War Office has made use of what is left of the Staff of the Corps, first in instructing successive batches of young officers for service in the New Armies, and latterly, with the aid of other officers detailed for the purpose, in training the members of two Officer Cadet Battalions.

The compilation of a Roll of Service would be wellnigh impossible but for the co-operation of those members of the staffs of the Colleges who have undertaken the preparation of the lists for their own Societies. They are usually busy men with many other duties, but they have spared neither time nor trouble in their voluntary task. I gladly take this opportunity of expressing my indebtedness to them, to the Vice-Chancellor, now as ever ready with help and encouragement, and to all who have directly and indirectly assisted in the production of this record. Especially do I wish to record the invaluable help I have received from one of my assistants, J. F. Wilmoughby, to whom perhaps more than to any one else is due any accuracy to which the second edition of the Roll may lay claim.

In conclusion may I express an earnest hope that Oxford men, and all who are interested in the University, will help us by supplying corrections and any information they can which will assist in making the Oxford Roll of Service a complete record of the part played by the University in this greatest war of all time. Such information should be addressed to the 'Compiler of the Service Roll' at the College concerned, or to the Assistant Registrar of the University.

As Sir Douglas Haig's dispatch of April 30, 1916, was published on June 16, after a large part of this edition had been printed off, it was impossible to include the 'mentions' in the Roll. A supplementary list of the Oxford men mentioned in the dispatch has therefore been added as an Appendix, see p. 323.
